Aesop’s Fable in Economics in Varoufakis
By Shomit Sirohi

I. The Story of Aesop’s Fables

A story of grasshopers who are labouring and in fact metaphysics of labour being exploited but for what a process of companies, many around the world exploiting them and then the story of how the labour grasshoppers win the struggle but then more crisis that the government has a grasshopper and person who is working on their economics which then is given to a longer story of many people who are in aporia when they are working on the whole process called a minotaur who is in fact taking the money away but as tributes which are paid in laws.

II. Varoufakis with the Story and Marxism in a New Game Theory

If we model this into a story of his speeches, Varoufakis I mean he argues that there is a global minotaur who si America which is taking the surplus from Europe an EU is also in this process which affects each country in Europe especially Greece. Game theory is basically talking about – metropolitan core and America with it and the process of exploitation being like games which describe it better for us.
